BACKGROUND

The necessity of an institutional diversity plan emerged from the findings and recommendations of the 2005 Chancellor’s Task Force on Diversity. The Task Force assessment concluded that while diversity clearly resonated as an important value for Carolina, the University community did not actually share a common understanding of diversity across the campus or of diversity priorities. To address this concern, the Task Force recommended that the University adopt common diversity goals and develop a plan to ensure accountability for achieving these goals. Diversity and Multicultural Affairs was given the responsibility, in consultation with the campus community, of formulating a diversity plan that includes annual benchmarks and evaluation methods for implementation and review. This plan also establishes an annual reporting process for sharing campus-wide efforts to address common diversity goals.

Institutional Commitment

The University’s Diversity Plan was implemented in fall 2006. The plan is designed to strengthen Carolina’s commitment to diversity by establishing a common set of goals for university leaders and an avenue for sharing related strategies and outcomes. Endorsed by the Chancellor after thorough review by the University’s senior leadership, the Diversity Plan is part of Carolina’s on-going commitment to be a leading public institution. Diversity is understood to be a key component of Carolina’s academic plan and our pursuit of excellence as a leading educational institution. As a public institution with a mission to serve all the people of North Carolina, the University is committed to ongoing attention to diversity in its many dimensions.

The Diversity Plan conveys the expectation that schools and units from across the institution are accountable for advancing university-wide diversity goals. The plan also establishes an annual process for Carolina academic and administrative units to report contributions to the institution’s diversity goals. This plan requires units to establish specific objectives tied to university-wide diversity goals, identify benchmarks for these objectives, and evaluate the unit’s accomplishments of these objectives.
Carolina’s Diversity Goals

Five goals serve as guides for Carolina’s diversity efforts:

1. Clearly define and publicize the University’s commitment to diversity.
2. Achieve the critical masses of underrepresented populations necessary to ensure the educational benefits of diversity in faculty, staff, students, and executive, administrative and managerial positions.
3. Make high quality diversity education, orientation, and training available to all members of the university community.
4. Create and sustain a climate in which respectful discussions of diversity are encouraged and take leadership in creating opportunities for interaction and cross group learning.
5. Support further research to advance the University’s commitment to diversity.

These goals are intended to guide all graduate and professional schools, the College of Arts and Sciences, departments and other academic and administrative units in establishing their specific objectives for addressing Carolina’s diversity goals and to develop specific strategies and assessment measures. A detailed description of each goal is available online at www.unc.edu/diversity/diversityplan/goals.html.

The Baseline Report

In Fall 2006, fourteen schools and thirteen administrative units submitted a brief report providing a baseline overview of recent (within the last two years) diversity-related initiatives or programs that address one or more of the University’s stated diversity goals. These reports varied according to the scope and depth of diversity-initiatives or programs each unit reported. The unit self-reports form the basis of this 2007 baseline report. Baseline reports were received from the following units:

College of Arts and Sciences  Department of Athletics
Graduate School  Diversity and Multicultural Affairs
Kenan Flagler School of Business  Equal Opportunity / ADA Office
School of Dentistry  Information Technology Services
School of Education  Office of Scholarships and Student Aid
School of Government  Office of the Provost and Executive Vice Chancellor: Centers and Institutes and International Affairs
School of Information and Library Science  Undergraduate Admissions
School of Journalism and Mass Communication  University Counsel
School of Law  University Library
School of Medicine  Vice Chancellor, Finance and Administration
School of Nursing  Vice Chancellor, Research and Economic Development
School of Pharmacy  Vice Chancellor, Student Affairs
School of Public Health  Vice Chancellor, Finance and Administration
School of Social Work  Vice Chancellor, Research and Economic Development
BASELINE FINDINGS

Executive Summary

The five central diversity goals identified by the Diversity Plan are currently addressed in substantive and diverse ways across the institution. Schools and administrative units described a variety of strategies, programs and initiatives in place that contribute to the University’s vision for diversity. These efforts help to position the University to reap the educational benefits of diversity.

All fourteen schools and thirteen administrative units reported efforts to recruit and retain students, faculty and/or staff from underrepresented populations (Goal 2). Thirteen of fourteen schools and ten of thirteen administrative units, or 85% of reporting units, described efforts to make diversity training and education widely available (Goal 3). Twelve of fourteen schools and nine of thirteen administrative units, or 78% of reporting units, are engaged in programs or initiatives addressing the communication of Carolina’s commitment to diversity (Goal 1). Seven of fourteen schools and eleven of thirteen administrative units, or 67% of reporting units, are involved efforts to create a climate that welcomes diversity and promotes cross-group interaction (Goal 4). Ten of fourteen schools and eight of thirteen administrative units, or 67% of reporting units, described some form of research related to diversity interests (Goal 5).

An overview of the diversity goals addressed by reporting units is offered below in Chart 1. A complete summary of diversity goals addressed by schools and administrative units is available in Table 1. A list of diversity-related initiatives and programs by unit is available in Appendix A.

GOAL 1
Define and publicize the University's commitment to diversity.

Twelve of fourteen schools and nine of thirteen administrative units reported programs or initiatives addressing the communication of Carolina’s commitment to diversity. Schools and units shared a number of strategies to address this goal, including the integration of diversity into mission, values and goal statements and the production of public documents that expressed a commitment to diversity.

Several schools employed marketing materials that include references to the significance of diversity to the institution and made an effort to represent the diversity of Carolina’s students, faculty and/or staff in media materials. Curricula that emphasized investigation of diversity in relation to specific disciplinary issues were also well represented across schools. In addition, recruitment activities targeting underserved populations were described by seven schools as one means of conveying the school’s commitment to diversity.

Administrative units consistently reported the inclusion of diversity priorities in mission, goal and vision statements, and annual reports. Other substantial efforts to publicize the institution’s commitment to diversity were evident in administrative unit recruitment practices. Strategies included assuring positions were posted in publications targeting diverse populations, composing search committees of diverse members and including the equal opportunity statement and non-discrimination policy in position advertisements. Public programs and research projects exploring dimensions of diversity were also described by a number of units as a means of conveying the centrality of diversity to inquiry and the university’s educational mission. Finally, some units made an effort to highlight the multicultural competencies of their staff as a means of publicizing a commitment to diversity.

HIGHLIGHTS of school & unit strategies

Finance and Administration
• Unit goals and values reference diversity, openness and inclusiveness.

Research and Economic Development
• Grant Source Library resources for underrepresented minority students
• Frank Porter Graham Multicultural Initiative Group

School of Dentistry
• School’s academic plan includes diversity as a major goal

School of Law
• Statement on public documents: “The School of Law is dedicated to helping minorities achieve satisfying careers in law. This diversity enriches the classroom experience for every student and we believe produces better lawyers.”

School of Public Health
• Annual Minority Health Conference, Annual Summer Public Health Research Institute, and Videoconference on Minority Health

School of Social Work
• New student orientation program emphasizes diversity and economic disparities

Student Affairs
• Carolina Way Orientation Program

Undergraduate Admissions
• Departmental mission statement expresses commitment to diversity

University Library
• Public collections represent diverse populations in the state
• Accessibility for on and off-site patrons
GOAL 2
Achieve the critical masses of underrepresented populations necessary to ensure the educational benefits of diversity.

All fourteen schools and thirteen administrative units reported efforts to recruit and retain students, faculty and/or staff from underrepresented populations.

School recruitment efforts focused on underrepresented populations, with the intent of addressing racial, ethnic and gender imbalances. Strategies for student recruitment included on and off-campus programs, conferences, student-organization events, participation in national organizations dedicated to the advancement of minority scholars, focused efforts to engage with Historically Black Universities and Colleges, and multi-day themed enrichment programs for high school and college students. Approaches for faculty and staff recruitment included communicating clear charges for search committees to track and enhance the diversity of school faculty and staff. Overall, more school programs and initiatives addressed the recruitment and retention of students than of faculty or staff. All but one school reported specific efforts to recruit students from underrepresented populations.

Among administrative units, strategies to achieve critical mass included enhancing the diversity of search committees, offering targeted recruitment programs for prospective students, mentoring Carolina Covenant students, educational programs to develop future students and scholars, conferences for high school students, future faculty programs and job fairs. Some units also contributed to these efforts by participating on search committees, hiring diverse student staff and offering orientation programs that emphasize diversity.

HIGHLIGHTS of school & unit strategies

Diversity and Multicultural Affairs
- Recruitment programs for underserved prospective students
- Leadership Institute

Equal Opportunity/ADA Office
- Monitors and consults on equal opportunity and diversity efforts

Facilities Planning and Construction
- Historically Underutilized Businesses Resource Center

Finance and Administration
- Faculty Spousal and Targeted Hiring Program

Graduate School
- Welcome Receptions for Minority and Native Graduate Students
- New Directions in American Indian Research Conference

Kenan Flagler Business School
- Alliance of Minority Business Students
- Carolina Women in Business

Office of the Provost and Executive Vice Chancellor: Centers and Institutes
- Moore Undergraduate Research Program, Institute for African American Research
- North Carolina Health Careers Access Program

Research and Economic Development
- Carolina Postdoctoral Program for Faculty Diversity

School of Medicine
- Medical Education Development Program
- Simmons Scholar Program

School of Nursing
- Ethnic Minority Scholars Program
- Nurse Exploration Week

Undergraduate Admissions
- Identify, recruit and enroll excellent undergraduates who contribute to critical masses
GOAL 3
Make diversity education and training available.

Thirteen of fourteen schools and ten of thirteen administrative units reported efforts to make diversity training and education widely available. The learning and training opportunities described included both department or unit specific programs and general programs open to the entire campus community.

A number of schools and departments (Dentistry, Education, Government, Information and Library Science, Journalism, Medicine) indicated that diversity had a central position in their curriculum. Others encourage staff to participate in university-sponsored diversity training.

Administrative units most frequently reported sponsoring or participating in diversity-related trainings specific to their professional duties. Units also reported providing staff expertise to diversity training and educational initiatives to colleagues at UNC and beyond.

HIGHLIGHTS of school & unit strategies

Department of Athletics
• NCAA Diversity Education Workshop

Diversity and Multicultural Affairs and Human Resources
• “Diversity in the Workplace” courses offered to employees and supervisors

Finance and Administration
• Carolina Dining Services management training with the Chapel Hill Institute for Cultural and Language Education

Office of the Provost and Executive Vice Chancellor: Centers and Institutes
• The Carolina Women’s Center, Sonja Haynes Stone Center for Black Culture and the Center for Teaching and Learning offer regular programming addressing diversity topics

School of Public Health
• Diversity at SPH orientation program

School of Nursing
• “Courageous Dialogues” and book club programs

School of Social Work
• S.A.G.E. (Students Achieving Graduate Education) Pre-Orientation Program

Student Affairs
• Housing and Residential Education monthly diversity programs
• Campus Y Table Talk Committee
• Campus Health Service provides in-services about diversity to staff across campus
GOAL 4
Create a climate for discussion of diversity and cross-group learning.

Seven of fourteen schools and eleven of thirteen administrative units reported efforts to create a climate that welcomes diversity and promotes cross-group interaction.

As appropriate, schools and departments have expanded their course offerings to include diversity as a topic for inquiry. Colloquia, retreats, guest speakers, committees and conferences also provided opportunities for discussions of diversity. Student organizations played a significant role in fostering dialogue within schools and departments.

Administrative units reported a variety of strategies to contribute to the open discussion of diversity. The development and sponsorship of public programs on diversity topics, in-house discussions and programs on diversity, mentoring of students, participation in diversity-related campus committees, and distribution of resources addressing diversity were among the most cited strategies for contributing to an inclusive campus climate.

HIGHLIGHTS of school & unit strategies

Department of Athletics
• Carolina Educators Mentoring Student Athletes program

Equal Opportunity/ADA Office
• Funded over $20,000 of accommodations for individuals with disabilities

Diversity and Multicultural Affairs
• Chair of annual MLK Birthday Celebration and co-sponsor of annual cultural and community events

Office of the Provost and Executive Vice Chancellor: Centers and Institutes
• Ackland Museum collections reflects the diverse communities of North Carolina
• Center for the Study of the American South holds programs on themes of cultural identity
• The North Carolina Botanical Garden developed multiple programs and exhibits focused on diversity

School of Dentistry
• Students are taught specific skills for effective communication with diverse populations

School of Education
• Retreat for faculty and graduate students on multicultural teaching and learning

School of Law
• “Colorlines” program and annual Conference on Race, Class, Gender and Ethnicity

School of Nursing
• Faculty and staff annual evaluations include a performance objective on contributions to the School’s climate of cross-cultural understanding

School of Public Health
• Minority Student Caucus hosts an annual Minority Health Conference
GOAL 5
Support research to advance the University’s commitment to diversity.

Ten of fourteen schools and eight of thirteen administrative units reported some form of research related to diversity. Few of these efforts addressed specific University commitments or interest, but were rather framed by larger social and disciplinary research questions.

As members of university committees and task forces, schools and departments have contributed to the investigation of the state of diversity at Carolina. In addition, some schools initiate and engage in research focused on diverse populations and shifting demographics and cultural identities in North Carolina and beyond.

As part of annual review efforts, units engaged in analysis of employee demographics and hiring outcomes. In addition, units reported participation in university task forces and studies designed to improve diversity-related policies and practices. Finally, some research centers and institutes lead an array of projects which examine diversity and contemporary multicultural issues.

HIGHLIGHTS of school & unit strategies

Equal Opportunity/ADA and Human Resources
• Analyze and respond to data on workforce demographics, with particular attention to SPA salary equity issues

Diversity and Multicultural Affairs
• Managed the Chancellor’s Task Force on Diversity (2005), which included an assessment of the state of diversity at Carolina

Office of the Provost and Executive Vice Chancellor: Centers and Institutes
• NC Health Careers Access Program initiated a study of the effectiveness of its Science Enrichment Preparation Program
• Institute of African-American Research is investigating factors that inhibit greater inclusion of underrepresented minorities and women as faculty in the academy

Office of the Provost and Executive Vice Chancellor: International Affairs
• Produced an outcome-oriented assessment of the impact of international studies on seniors and freshman

School of Law
• Center for Banking and Finance conducted a study of diversity on corporate boards and sponsors the Director Diversity Initiative
• Center for Civil Rights hosts research efforts related to public education in North Carolina

School of Public Health
• Selected to participate in the Engaged Institutions Initiative funded by the W.K. Kellog Foundation to develop a strategic plan to address diverse research needs for eliminating health disparities in North Carolina
Oportunidades para el futuro

Es claro desde este informe de línea base que se evidencian importantes esfuerzos para abordar los cinco objetivos de diversidad de la universidad a lo largo de las escuelas, departamentos y unidades del instituto. Sin embargo, existen áreas que recibieron menos atención y necesitan desarrollo adicional.

Objeto 2: Lograr las masas críticas de poblaciones subrepresentadas necesarias para garantizar beneficios educativos de la diversidad

Aunque todas las unidades informaron de esfuerzos para lograr una masa crítica de poblaciones subutilizadas, un número de unidades recurrieron en el reporte de estadísticas demográficas para demostrar que los esfuerzos de contratación y retención estaban en lugar, en lugar de describir iniciativas o programas específicos que abordan cuestiones de masa crítica. Además, la mayoría de los programas y iniciativas que abordan masa crítica se centraron en estudiantes. Según la información proporcionada en los informes de escuela y unidad, los profesores y el personal recibieron mucha menos atención en los programas que abordan masa crítica. Esto es un área que requerirá más desarrollo y atención en el futuro. El cuadro 2 a continuación muestra un resumen de la meta de las esfuerzos de escuela y unidad para abordar masa crítica.

Cuadro 2.
Meta de esfuerzos de contratación y retención reportados por escuelas y unidades administrativas.
Goal 3: Make high quality diversity education, orientation, and training available.

While this goal was addressed by many schools and units, opportunities for diversity education and training appeared to be episodic. Student orientations were reported by a number of schools as a key strategy; however, similar opportunities were not reported for faculty or staff. Further, it is unclear how well these programs are engaging the campus as a whole in education and training. The establishment of more systematic training and educational opportunities along with a deliberate assessment process on the efficacy of such training should be a goal for the future.

Goal 4: Create a climate for discussion of diversity and cross-group learning.

While most units reported efforts to create and sustain a climate where respectful discussions of diversity could occur, few described specific initiatives or practices that specifically encouraged large numbers of students, faculty and staff to engage in these discussions. Disparity in access to such opportunities is also related to employment status, as SPA employees in particular have much more limited access to interactive learning opportunities and need the support of managers to engage in these discussions. Future efforts should consider the development of more public and widely accessible activities to engage a significant portion of the University community in cross-group learning.

Goal 5: Support further research to advance the University’s commitment to diversity.

Of the five diversity goals, the least reported area was research efforts to enhance the University’s commitment to diversity. Clearly, many schools, departments and units across the university are concerned with diversity in their research and routinely address issues affecting minority populations. However, most of the reported research was not specifically related to higher education, the educational benefits of diversity, or Carolina’s institutional challenges. To advance the University’s diversity goals, it is essential that campus environments and practices are investigated by the scholars of this institution. Expanded engagement in research focused on diversity in higher education generally and at Carolina specifically should be a goal for the future.
Appendix A: Summary of Reported Diversity-related Initiatives and Programs by Goal and Unit

GOAL 1: Clearly define and publicize the University’s commitment to diversity.

Twelve of fourteen schools and nine of thirteen administrative units reported programs or initiatives addressing the communication of Carolina’s commitment to diversity.

Schools

College of Arts and Sciences
- Position vacancy announcements publicize the University’s commitment to diversity, as does advertising openings and programs for historically black institutions.
- The North Carolina chapter of the National Organization of Black Chemists and Chemical Engineers is sponsored by the Department of Chemistry.
- The Department of Geography highlights its commitment to diversity in its published mission statement.

Graduate School
- Several publications communicate the School’s commitment to creating a diverse and inclusive climate for all graduate students.
- The School is a member of national groups involved in the recruitment of underrepresented students, including Graduate Degrees for Minorities in Engineering and Science, Inc. and National Name Exchange.

Kenan-Flagler Business School
- Marketing materials meet the University diversity guidelines.
- The Kenan-Flager website links to University diversity policy and includes other pages devoted to diversity.

School of Education
- The core mission statement publicizes the School’s commitment to diversity, equity and social justice.

School of Government
- The School actively pursues a diversity of instructors and students for its Institute of Government educational programs, a key public program serving NC public officials.
- The School adopted a policy of “Principles of Diversity in Initial Faculty Appointments.”
- A “Diversity in Public Service” scholarship fund was established.

School of Journalism and Mass Communication
- Key publicity materials and media such as the school website and newsletter include substantial material about diversity and accomplishments by diverse students, faculty and staff.
• Current minority students works to help recruit high school seniors to the school.
• The Ethics and Excellence in Journalism Foundation awarded the school a grant to develop and carry out a high school diversity workshop in summer 2007.

School of Law
• A commitment to diversity is publicized through the school’s website, mission statement and vacancy announcements.

School of Nursing
• The School’s Office of Multicultural Affairs hosts a website, maintains a community-based advisory board, produces and distributes a public diversity quick facts sheet, and offers public options for contributions to support diversity efforts.

School of Pharmacy
• The School developed and distributed a recruitment DVD, “360 Degrees of Opportunity.”

School of Public Health
• The Dean’s efforts to establish diversity as a high priority includes the creation of a Special Assistant to the Dean for Diversity, extensive outreach to school and community groups, alumni and boards on diversity and health disparities, plus focus groups with students.
• Diversity is highlighted on the School’s website.
• Flagship programs, such as the Annual Minority Health Conference, the Minority Health Project, and the Annual Summer Public Health Research Institute and Videoconference showcase the School’s commitment to diversity and minority health issues.
• Commitment to diversity was one criteria for the selection of five new department chairs recruited within the last year.

School of Information and Library Science
• A Diversity Committee established in 2004 has drafted a SILS Diversity Statement diversity-related goals for faculty review.

School of Social Work
• New student orientation addresses diversity and the values of the social work profession each year.
• The School is committed to promoting a respect for difference as it relates to age, gender, race, class, color, national origin, religion, philosophical perspective, disability and sexual orientation.
• Recruitment materials include language and photographs that communicate the School’s commitment to serve a diverse student body.
Administrative Units

Athletics
- The Student Athlete Handbook Statement on Diversity is widely distributed.
- A Department Diversity Committee addresses issues for diversity for NCAA certification process and regular review of climate, presence, academic persistence, retention, hiring and promotion.
- Prospective student-athletes are introduced to on-campus minority professionals at Carolina.

Diversity and Multicultural Affairs
- The unit mission mirrors the University diversity goals and values.
- The unit leads and publicizes the University’s commitment to diversity assessment, including producing annual reports on pan-university diversity efforts.
- The unit engages in marketing the University’s commitment to diversity, publicizes diversity activities and informing university leaders of key diversity issues and achievements.

Equal Opportunity/ADA
- The University’s Equal Opportunity Plan and university policy statement are widely shared.
- The equal opportunity statement is included in all position advertisements.

Finance and Administration
- Unit goals and values include specific references to diversity, openness and inclusiveness, as do the missions and value statements of many subunits.

Centers and Institutes, Office of the Provost and Executive Vice Chancellor
- Many Centers exemplify diversity values in their core work, including NC-HCAP, the Stone Center, the Institute for African American Research, the Carolina Women’s Center, and soon the American Indian Center.
- Other centers express commitment to diversity through their missions, programming and service to the campus and the wider community.

Student Affairs
- Public attention to diversity is evident in the hiring process, mission statements, program development, student services and physical spaces.
- Long-time collaborative relationships are maintained with offices outside the division that focus on diversity issues.

Undergraduate Admissions
- Unit goals reflect university diversity goals and values.
- Unit media and publicity materials highlight diversity information.
- Institutional commitment to diversity is shared through professional organizations and partnerships.
University Counsel
- The unit reviews criteria for scholarships and endowments to assure criteria are legally defensible, and reviews the potential for expansion of more inclusive programs on campus.
- The University’s Statement on Non-Discrimination is reviewed and updated each year.
- Other contributions include participation in search committees for key university leadership positions and in university committees addressing diversity, such as the Chancellor’s Task Force on Diversity, NCAA Certification Self-Study and Sexual Harassment Advisory Committee.
- The unit coordinates responses regarding University affirmative action practices for hiring SPA employees for an external agency and provides legal advice on equal opportunity and diversity issues to campus groups.

University Library
- Collections seek to include diverse groups present in North Carolina.
- Accessible facilities and remote service options publicize the university’s commitment to access and enhance the experience of all patrons.

Vice Chancellor for Research and Economic Development
- Frank Porter Graham Child Development Institute formed a Multicultural Initiative Group to implement a vision for research and outreach on multicultural issues.
- Grant Source Library developed funding resources for underrepresented students.
- Center for Aging and Diversity, founded in 2003, addresses health disparities.
- Odum Institute is part of the Atlantic Coast Social, Behavioral and Economic Sciences Alliance to increase the number of underrepresented minority students entering science, technology, engineering and mathematics fields.
- NSF Science and Technology Center includes a chapter of the National Organization of Black Chemists and Chemical Engineers.
GOAL 2: Achieve the critical masses of underrepresented populations necessary to ensure the educational benefits of diversity.

All fourteen schools and thirteen administrative units reported efforts to recruit and retain students, faculty and/or staff from underrepresented populations.

Schools

College of Arts and Sciences
- Over 11 Departments have benefited from recruiting candidates from the minority post-doc program.
- Many departments make special efforts to recruit of students from underrepresented populations. Hank Frierson’s SBE and SPGRE programs, as well as NC OPT-ED were cited as key resources for these efforts.
- Gender imbalance is being addressed in a number of departments including Philosophy, Physics and Astronomy, Biology, Chemistry, Computer Science, Geology, Art History, African and Afro-American Studies and Academic Advising.
- Department of Geography considers “how well applicants represent the diversity of North Carolina, the U.S. and the world” in its admission criteria.
- Substantial diversity in gender, ethnicity, religious affiliation and sexual identity has been accomplished by several departments, including Art, Asian Studies, Exercise and Sports Science, Linguistics, Romance Languages and Slavic Languages and Literatures.

Graduate School
- A variety and recruitment activities and conferences address outreach to minority students, including campus fairs, recruitment alliance events and hosting on-site campus visits.
- Other recruitment/retention efforts include Diversity Awareness Action Committee Workshops, Sister Circle Networking, New Directions in American Indian Research Conference, Native Graduate Student Welcome Reception, Minority Graduate Students Welcome Reception, New Graduate Students of Color Luncheon, monthly coffee break for first year graduate students and a PhinisheD, a dissertation support group for students of color.
- The School works closely with the following programs to support research experiences for underrepresented students: Summer Pre-Graduate Research Experience Program (SPGRE), Summer Undergraduate Research Fellowships (SURE) and Research Education Support (RES) Program in the Biomedical and Health Sciences.

Kenan-Flagler Business School
- The School hosts a variety of prospective student programs, including an annual preview weekend with the Alliance of Minority Business Students, annual Women’s Workshop for prospective female MBA applicants and Admit Weekend with a brunch for GLBTA students.
- Membership in the Consortium for Graduate Study in Management, which seeks to increase the number of underrepresented minorities attending full-time MBA programs, the Forte Foundation, which seeks to increase the number of women in business, and the PhD Project, a national organization to recruit minority candidates to doctoral programs, contributions to critical mass efforts.

- The Master of Accounting Program partners with Diversity and Multicultural Affairs and corporate sponsors to support the Leadership Institute, a business leadership development program for students from underserved populations.
- Hiring diverse faculty is a high priority and efforts are also made to diversity EPA and SPA staff.

School of Dentistry
- A key goal of the School’s academic plan is to increase diversity among faculty, staff and students to reflect the diversity of the state of North Carolina. Supporting efforts including investing financial aid to make the school’s program accessible for qualified North Carolina residents.
- In collaboration with the Medical Education Development (MED) Program, the School sponsors a summer program for minority student and students from underserved areas.

School of Education
- Recruitment and retention of minority professionals and students is a high priority for search and enrollment.

School of Government
- “Principles of Diversity” in faculty recruitment policy was established.
- The School participates in job fairs that include diverse and minority populations, and seeks to prepare current minority doctoral students to become future faculty.

School of Journalism and Mass Communication
- The School is strongly committed to increasing diversity among faculty, staff, undergraduate and graduate students.
- Undergraduate minority students can take advantage of a large number of scholarships offered with a preference for both minority and underprivileged students.

School of Law
- Faculty recruitment is conducted primarily through the Association of American Law Schools.
- Student recruitment is supported by a majority African American Admissions Office staff plus a number of programs such as Minority Law Day, visits to historically black colleges and universities, and Hispanic and Native American serving institutions. Admitted students are contacted by the Dean and information is shared about alumni of color. Communications and visits with current students of color are also arranged.

School of Medicine
- Recruitment activities for students include visitation by current medical students to historically black institutions and presentations at national conferences.
- The Medical Education Program increases the diversity of the applicant pool and is
